Canva cofounder says Australian investors don't understand tech and that's why they're listing in the US

<text>

"The husband of CEO and cofounder Melanie Perkins, named the 10th richest person in Australia, alongside his wife, with a combined wealth of $10.92 billion, told the AFR business summit last week that it was "obvious" the US-registered business would IPO in America because Australian investors "don't understand tech as well, [compared to] higher multiples, more sophisticated investors in the US".

Why the ASX 200 has gone nowhere in 16 years

🙎 Roger Montgomery | 🗰 8 November 2023 | 🗩 90 | 🛉 🎔 in | 🕿 🖶

Here's an interesting piece of information about the S&P/ASX 200 index:

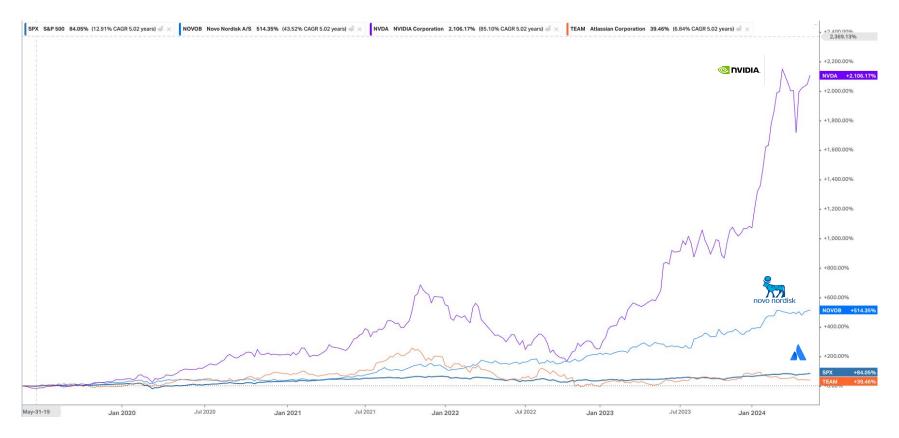

- November 2007: 6851 points
- October 2023: 6853 points
- Total Capital Gain: 0.02%
- Annualised Capital Gain: 0.00182% p.a.

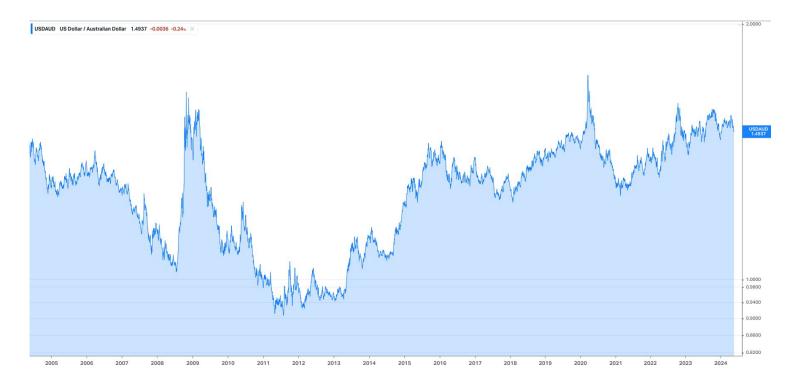

Warren Buffett's Berkshire Hathaway is a prized example of this decision in action. Berkshire has generated circa 20 per cent returns on equity (ROE) for over 50 years and never paid a dividend. Most income investors would be aghast. But the result is that the equity grows each year by 20 per cent, and as long as the ROE stays at 20 per cent, the earnings also grow by 20 per cent per annum. That's why Berkshire's share price today is US$512,000 per share. If an investor needs some income, they can sell a share.

If Warren and Charlie can generate 20 per cent per year on your shareholder money, why would you want them to pay it out to you? The best you might do is five per cent in a term deposit. It's smarter to let Warren and Charlie keep the money and earn 20 per cent a year for you.
